Legislative Proposals in the 88th Congress to Establish a Joint Committee on Intelligence

1. Attached is a list of the proposals introduced to date in the 88th Congress calling for the establishment of a Joint Committee on Intelligence.

2. A close watch has been kept on these proposals. There have been no hearings in this Congress and we know of no plans for such hearings. A number of the sponsors of these proposals have introduced similar proposals in previous Congresses. There have been no recent significant developments with the exception of Mr. Lindsay's well-reasoned speech on the floor of the House when he introduced a resolution.

3. The House leadership is opposed to the establishment of joint committees as a matter of principle. In addition, the Chairmen of the CIA Subcommittees have in the past indicated they are satisfied with present arrangements and are opposed to the establishment of a Joint Committee on Intelligence.

4. In 1960, following the Cuban invasion, the House Rules Committee conducted hearings on granting a rule to permit House consideration of the Joint Committee proposals then pending. It was reported in the press that the Rules Committee had considered action on the numerous resolutions pending before it but decided to take no action "... because the time to consider them seemed improptious." The only other congressional action on Joint Committee legislation occurred in 1956 when a bill sponsored by Senator Mansfield was reported and came to a vote in the Senate. The Senate vote defeating Mansfield's resolution (59 to 27) indicated that ten co-sponsors of his resolution actually voted against the measure when it reached the Senate floor.

5. In addition to the bills, three other proposals which are of interest are listed in the attachment. One is a House resolution (H. Con. Res. 60) calling for an investigation of CIA and the Department of State following the Cuban crisis. The second (H. Con. Res. 51) calls for a study to determine the "... true facts surrounding the Bay of Pigs invasion...."

The third is a bill introduced by Senator Humphrey to establish a Joint Committee on National Security Affairs (including intelligence activities).
We have no information indicating that there are any present plans to conduct hearings on any of these measures.
